

A complicated garden party

Anne and Tony are trying to prepare a garden party – but everything goes wrong ...

Anne: We have to make invitation cards ... then we need a table and chairs, and food ... and drinks ...

Tony: I can buy crisps and lemonade –

Anne: No, you can't! Crisps and lemonade! Really! No way. We need tea, mineral water, and orange juice. And let's make a cake, and sausages, and a salad, and –

Tony: No problem. You can make the cake, the sausages and the salad, and I can buy the crisps.

Anne: Very funny. I think mum can help us with the food. We must talk to her later. Let's make the invitation cards, then.

Tony: We can send our friends an email, can't we? We don't need invitation cards.

Anne: Yes, we do! Invitation cards are nice. Now, who would you like to invite?

Tony: Well, I want to invite Steve, Michael and Tina –

Anne: Don't be stupid, you can't invite Michael AND Tina! They hate each other!

Tony: Fine, then just Tina.

Anne: You can't invite Steve if you don't invite Michael. They're best friends.

Tony: Fine, then just Michael –

Anne: But Tina invited you to her birthday party, Tony. You must invite her.

Tony: That's silly, Anne.

Anne: No, it's not! It's a serious problem.

Tony: Okay, let's talk about that later. What else do we need?

Anne: Decorations. Balloons, candles, a colourful tablecloth, a –

Tony: Just candles, please.

Anne: You're so lazy, Tony.

Tony: No, I'm not. I just don't like balloons. They're for little kids. What about music? I've got a few good CDs, and –

Anne: No, you haven't. Nobody wants to listen to your CDs. You haven't got any music for a party. We need a CD with party songs.

Tony: I like my CDs.

Anne: Well, the others don't. We can ask Jenny to bring her CDs along. Her CDs are great.

Tony: Okay ...

Five hours later ...

Mum: Now, what about your party?

Tony: Great. We're almost done.

Anne: No, we aren't! We still have to prepare party games, look up recipes for cakes, and find some nice DVDs, if it rains, we – Tony, where are you going? Tony, STAY HERE!!!
